

Program Manager

CUAHSI, a small non-profit organization, is looking for a Program Manager to work in a dynamic, engaging environment.

CUAHSI is dedicated to advancing hydrologic science. This position will be responsible for planning, oversight of interdisciplinary research projects, and for translating scientific program results into public education materials. Technical writing skills are required. This is an outstanding opportunity for a scientist or recent graduate to move from research into scientific project administration and management.

The position is based in CUAHSI's Washington, D.C. office. A Master's degree in engineering, watershed science, or a related field is required. Up to 25% travel may be necessary. CUAHSI offers a competitive salary and excellent fringe benefits.
