      ■ Future funding. A collaborative proposal with a NOAA Cooperative Institute Univ. of Alabama is underway and will be submitted this quarter. Bales also reported additional funding from the Internet of Water team for CUAHSI’s activity on the project. CUAHSI is also working on a cooperative institute proposal with Northeastern Univ.

5. IRB Process for CUAHSI
   a. Bales summarized that participant surveys have been relatively informal and ad hoc in the past. Bales intends for formalize the process for surveying participants, including better understanding current services and community needs. To that end, Bales has discussed the need for CUAHSI to engage in an IRB process for surveys. This is important if CUAHSI will publish any data about activities or the community, which is a goal for the organization. His proposal was to identify if the IRB process at one of the institutional PIs could leverage the existing process at their home institution.
   b. Jefferson and Loheide are collaborating on an existing effort, which is being led via JEfferson’s institution.
   c. The group discussed potential training requirements and arranging appropriate access for institutions in terms of training, data storage, and other logistics.
   d. Jefferson identified a need to clarify access to training (e.g., CITI Human Subjects), how CUAHSI staff work through or are overseen by a Board member whose institutional IRB would be used, and some guidance on data storage and access.
   e. The group also discussed limitations of data storage and identifiable data that could present challenges.
   f. Loheide also noted the potential to engage private firms for IRB review and approval.
   g. Bales noted this is not an urgent need, but that he does want to get a process in place to keep this organized and consistent in the future as staff continue to implement evaluation of projects and surveying participants.

6. Nominations for CUAHSI Directors, 2022 – 2024
   a. Jefferson presented a slate of 11 nominees for the 6 open Board seats on behalf of the nominating committee (herself, Zimmer, and D. Guswa):

   b. The vote for bylaws will be scheduled to coincide with the Board elections.
